

THAI MASSAGE EFFECTS

Helps release the blockages and stimulates the flow of life energy, which establishes a balance of body, mind and spirit. By this different psycho-physical problems are eliminated.

Thai massage physiological effects to a circulatory system are better blood and lymph circulation and reduced heart rate. It reduces the edema caused by slow lymph flow and accelerates toxins' departure from the body. Furthermore, tendons and muscles are relaxed, joints are unlimbered and the whole body is more flexible. A superior nervous and digestive system is stimulated and more active.

Modern variations of traditional Thai massage helps removing mental and physical stress, relax the body and ease muscles' problems caused by increased physical effort. Also they reduce the incidence of chronic pain problems, balance work of the entire body and help to fight against cellulite.

THAI PAMPERING OR THAI FOOT MASSAGE (60 MIN)

The massage includes the following: foot bath and exfoliation, massage of shoulder joints with ointment balm made with traditional Thai herbs. This is followed by intensive foot, ankle and leg massage and massage of shoulder joints, neck, head, arms and hands (Thai ointment balm and oil).

The massage is performed in a sitting-lying position. You will enjoy relaxing Thai music too.

Do not put it off, you won't regret it!

SAUNA

The word sauna is of Finnish origin and means a type of bath where the body is initially warmed up in hot air and then cooled down under a cold shower.

With its warming and cooling phases the sauna has a beneficial effect on the skin, breathing, heart, blood pressure, kidneys, glands, nerves and mental state. Heating and cooling phases cleanse and regenerate the skin, accelerate cell regeneration, thoroughly moisten the skin and stimulate and invigorate blood circulation. Heating phases affect breathing with outstanding circulation of respiratory passages and bronchial relaxation, whilst the cooling phase enables rapid compensation of oxygen shortage due to the hot environment.

Saunas have been used since ancient times in the form of various refreshing baths. Baths have been replaced by Finnish saunas which experienced major increase in popularity in the 20th century with their global expansion from the Scandinavian countries. The Finnish sauna is also known as the genuine sauna since all other types of saunas we know today were developed from this type.
